"THE IRISH BRIGADES: 1685-2006"

BY COL. W.R.H. CHARLEY O.B.E.

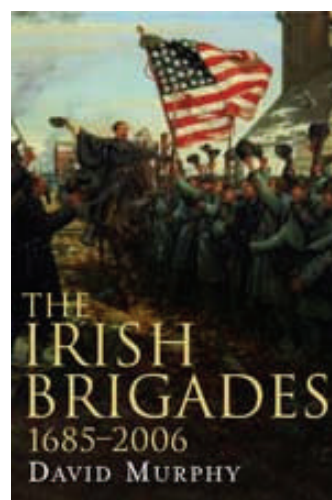

A Review:

"The Irish Brigades, 1685-2006, a gazetteer of Irish military service, past and present", researched and written by Dr. David Murphy and published by Four Courts Press (2007), was commissioned by The Military Heritage of Ireland Trust Ltd. Our Newsletter for December 2007 carries the announcement of the publication. The following review of the book has been submitted by Colonel W.R.H (Robin) Charley O.B.E., Honorary Treasurer of the Somme Association.

" The work the author has done to produce all the locations of Irish units in Chapter 7 is really brilliant.

When I was Curator of the R.U.R. Museum about 30 years ago, it took me simply ages trying to record the locations of just the 83rd and 86th Regiments for each year and he has done it for hundreds of units!

The book really is brilliant and most useful. It will be the front volume on my bookshelves from now on."

David Murphy is a lecturer in military history in the History Department of NUI Maynooth. He was a major contributor to the Royal Irish Academy's Dictionary of Irish Biography and is the author of Ireland and the Crimean War (2002).

Blaze Away – Duelling, Gun Makers & Sword Makers in 19th Century Ireland

An exhibition examining duelling in Ireland and the work of two Irish families who made swords and guns in Dublin in the 19th century will open in Collins Barracks, Dublin during the coming winter of 2008. The Rigby family of Suffolk Street were Ireland's most famous gun makers and the Read family of Parliament Street were Ireland's most renowned sword makers. Dublin had a large armaments industry in the 19th century and the exhibition will highlight this work by bringing out of storage the Museum's large collection of swords and guns.

SPECIAL EXHIBITION : UN 50

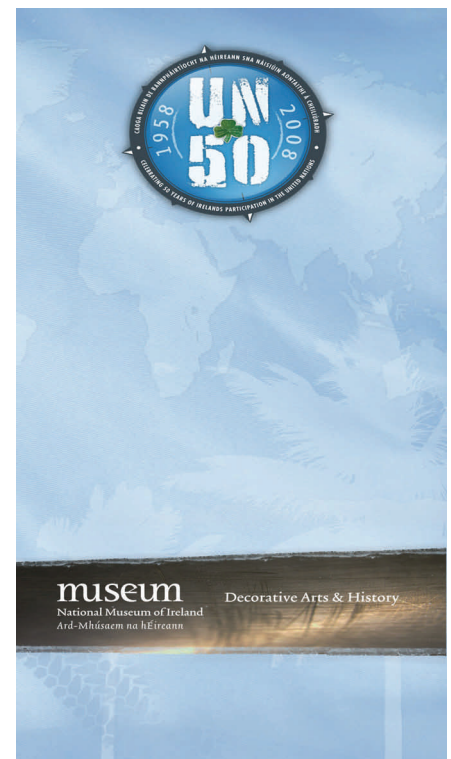

Part of Soldiers and Chiefs: The Irish at War at Home and Abroad Since 1550.

Ireland joined the United Nations in 1955 and since 1958 has been involved continuously in peacekeeping duties throughout the world. The UN 50 exhibition examines the role played by these Irish men and women in the cause of world peace over the last 50 years in particular looking at their service in Congo, Cyprus, Somalia, the Sinai, Lebanon, Liberia and Chad. Over 800 peacekeepers have lost their lives in the service of the United Nations of whom 10% were Irish.

The exhibition continues to December 2008 and contains interactives about Irish peacekeepers and equipment from their tours in Congo and Lebanon. UN 50 is part of Soldiers and Chiefs: The Irish at War at Home and Abroad Since 1550 permanent exhibition at The National Museum of Ireland - Decorative Arts & History, Collins Barracks Dublin 7.

ADMISSION to all exhibitions is FREE OF CHARGE.

The museum is open from 10am to 5pm Tuesday to Saturday and from 2pm to 5pm on Sundays.
